the place of arrest, may have been "a crucial factor in the defendant's decision to cooperate [with police], and was not obtained in violation of any constitutional rights." Id. at 611, 96 S.Ct. at 2832. Thus, in the present case, the effect of the police's statement to Biggins that they knew he was a convicted felon could only have been coercive and inducing. That a truthful statement about Biggins' record would only have been detrimental to him does not alter this conclusion. 3. The effect on the will of the defendant Biggins' will was affected by the statement. He contends that the statement as such "might cause a man in [his] position to believe that if he does not tell the police what he knows they will make his life difficult." Answer at 20. However, because the statement did not induce Biggins to make the statement, we must direct our inquiry to what effect the statement had upon the accused. In Bradford v. Kentucky, 470 U.S. 60, 105 S.Ct. 1074, 84 L.Ed.2d 46 (1985), the defendant was convicted of attempted armed robbery. On appeal, the Kentucky Supreme Court ruled that the trial court erred in refusing to give a jury instruction that read as follows: "If... The Supreme Court's analysis of this question began with the observation that "a state rule limiting admissible evidence, either to relevant or irrelevant material, is not a federal constitutional rule." Id. at 64, 105 S.Ct. at 1077. This statement must be read in light of the Supreme Court's previous holding in Davis v. Alaska, 415 U.S. 308, 316-17, 94 S.Ct. 1105, 1110, 39 L.Ed.2d 347 (1974), that "the accused does not have an unfettered right to rebut adverse inferences drawn by the State from an inspection of his [own] probation record," because the state rule limiting ad
