Taking a screen grab When you take a picture with a camera, you probably just send it to your computer. That's the only way you can view it. Most people open their camera to a darkroom to process and view their images. If you need to view your photos from your camera on your computer, you have three ways to do so: * Screen grab. * A _screen grab_ is a small picture taken by a program on your computer. It enables you to see what your photo looks like without having it open in a program that takes up a lot of system resources. Windows users can take a screen grab by pressing the Print Screen (Windows logo key) + PrtSc (e key) buttons at the same time, and Macintosh users can press the Control-Printscreen (fn) key. (If you have a tablet, the equivalent is the Command-3 key.) If you want to see what your photo looks like in full size, you can easily move the picture from the screen grab to a program on your computer. The most popular method is to simply open the photo in Photoshop. For the best results, I suggest opening the file in the Photoshop

Q: React Native Firebase Database Query Child Data I am having trouble figuring out how to properly query the Firebase database, in order to fetch all children with a certain "name" attribute and display those children in the render method. I understand that the code is very inefficient, but I was unable to find an alternative. I tried playing around with `ref={this.ref}`, but it did not show up. Code: `import React, {Component} from 'react'; import {Text, View} from 'react-native'; export default class App extends Component { constructor() { super(); this.state = { list: [], items: [] } this.currentUser = firebase.auth().currentUser; this.ref = firebase.database().ref('items'); } _addItem = () => { this.ref.push({ name: this.currentUser.uid, description: 'This is a test' }) } _removeItem = (id) => { this.ref.child(id).remove(); } _updateItem = (item) => { this.ref.child(item.id).update({ name: item.name, description: item.description }); } _removeUser = () => { this.ref.remove(); } componentDidMount() { this.ref.on('value', (snapshot) => { const items = snapshot.val() || []; this.setState({ items }); }); } render() { return (`

What are the common mistakes newbie game developers make? I'd like to know. I am in no way a "newbie" programmer, but I just don't seem to get game engines very easy. Many places say this is a common error. I've tried to go through a video tutorial on a site called Game Craft, and it never goes through without screwing up some part. What are some of the common mistakes that people make when making games? Edit: Just thought I'd mention, I have to edit a game file every so often. One of the most common mistakes is trying to get everything working in the first go. It is common to get that perfect first load in that's going to make for some really exciting action but that doesn't mean that your going to be able to maintain it in the long run. There are a number of pitfalls with game development, with a few of the most common being: 1) Getting hung up on resolution, when what really matters is frame rate. 2) Getting hung up on the actual mechanics of the game, when what really matters is what the story is telling you. 3) Thinking "common" is the only rule that applies. One of the most common mistakes is not programming the majority of the game as first time. This happens when you start learning a new language/framework/IDE and then you try to apply it to your game the first time. So you will say "I will just run through the tutorial, because it is simple and then I will apply that to my own game". Do not do this, you will end up losing a lot of time debugging some simple errors and then you will not know how to solve the problem in your own game. I recommend that before you go through a tutorial, read the documentation and figure out how you are suppose to solve your problem. java-gaming.org is not responsible for the content posted by its members, including references to external websites, and other references that may or may not have a relation with our primarily gaming and game production oriented community. inquiries and complaints can be sent via email to the info-account of the company managing the website of java-gaming.org SHARE THIS ARTICLE Share Tweet Post Email Oil prices fell yesterday for a fourth day, topping $50 a barrel for the first time since June 2008, as the drawdown in global supplies that has cut
