Satellite tracker software from Ground Systems Inc. allows you to track location, altitude, and time for satellites and planes, or anything else for that matter, by just entering a satellite or plane's ID into the software. Footprint Satellite Tracker can automatically track a satellite or airplane at any time, using NASA and global tracking data. You can even track multiple satellites. This information can be found in Footprint Satellite Tracker's detailed satellite tracking data screen, and satellite orbit plots can also be generated for analysis. Unique features include the ability to track satellite ID, altitude, and distance from Earth, detailed satellite tracking data, viewing satellite altitude, orbital track, satellite flight path, and orbit plot for all satellites. Here's an example of large amount of data used to generate satellite trajectory. The data is the FAST satellite Ephemeris, which is an orbital element table produced by the FCC's Satellite Data Information Service. It provides a near real-time, detailed orbital description of more than 2700 active communications satellites. This orbit is based on the U.S. Government's official reference frame, which is known as the Inertial Reference Frame. The U.S. Government also maintains a star catalog that indicates which constellation each satellite belongs to. To create the FAST satellite Ephemeris files, the FCC's Satellite Data Information Service uses the data received from NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory's Center for Near Earth Object Studies, along with information provided by the U.S. Air Force's Space Command, as well as the U.S. Air Force's Defense Meteorological Satellite Program (DMSP). It tracks Internet data packets through Earth's orbit and prevents unauthorized access to a network. Protect yourself from hackers and hackers with a geofence that is automatically triggered by Internet traffic. Our system is deployed in an ultra-secure environment with two important security benefits. First, in such an environment we are able to capture a large amount of encrypted Internet traffic to create a comprehensive database of all internet traffic. Second, we can monitor, capture and analyze Internet traffic in real time, making it virtually

Footprint Satellite Tracker is the perfect tool for monitoring the satellites in orbit. Footprint Satellite Tracker gives you the possibility to track satellite movement around the globe. At launch the main window shows up, with a map of the entire globe, and several points of interest, such as the sun, moon, current location, and a satellite. You can easily change the time to predict the course of satellites, by adjusting year, month, day, hour, and minute values. You can also define location, which is automatically changed to your current location if set. All these settings can be configured through simple control panels, and saved into application settings. If you need to predict satellite course on the whole globe, or only in your area, you can use the speed tracking mode. In this case, Footprint Satellite Tracker automatically follows the path of a satellite for the next selected time. Predictions are available for the next day, or 24 hours from the current time. If you need to define your source of satellite tracking information, you can click the panel with this information, which helps you to better select the current location for tracking satellite movement. Additionally, you can turn on audio alarms to let you know when satellite tracking has been changed. You can also create reports and lists based on ephemeris data for the satellite you track. All of this is very easy to do and set up, and you'll have a convenient tool in your research efforts.
