Justmapzz

----- Justmapzz is a tool that works with numerous online maps. It allows the user to view the map displayed and at the same time compute the route distances between any two points. Justmapzz automatically determines the altitude of a map and provides the user with a thorough information on average altitude, that is, the distance from the sea level. It has a simple, yet effective design. The interface is simple, as only a few menus will need to be consulted. Once the entry page is loaded, several options can be selected. For instance, the user can select the altitude to take into account when calculating route distances. They can also customize the look of the displayed map and even remove unimportant chart elements. It is also possible to add custom tracks, which can then be saved to disk. After the requested information has been selected, the program will find the most recent version of each map service on the web, making it easy to select the one that is best suited. Furthermore, it is possible to add other custom track routes. The software will compute the distances and routes between the two given points. The user can even read the generated map annotations. This allows the user to add waypoints or pins to a map, or even show a route on a chosen map service. Furthermore, when saving a map, all generated annotations can be saved to disk. This tool will use Save As and also offers the possibility to save the file in PNG format. possible use would be in educating children. The ability to add user-defined tracks also makes it a very good hiking aid. Justmapzz features a highly intuitive interface that most users will find very pleasant. The number of buttons is kept to a very low value and those that do exist are grouped together by functionality. The most use the few menu items present will see is when maps have to be exported or imported. For everything else the buttons will suffice. Integrates with numerous (online) maps providers Essentially, the software allows users to view any location on the globe. Once a search string has been entered, the resource will display the given location (if valid). It should be noted that the tool is very thorough, so if the query doesn't return any results then one can use an alternate map provider. The number of charts providers is one of the strong points of this application. There are no less than 16 options (including the major providers, such as a Google, Bing or Ovi). Therefore, it is a good idea to make good use of the generous number of providers, as map details can vary. Customized maps can be exported to PNG format Another notable program feature is the ability to make annotations on the charts. Pins and waypoints can be added for pedestrians, bicycles or cars, and the program can automatically compute the distance between the two points. The modified map can then be exported to PNG and printed. To conclude, Justmapzz is a detailed and powerful resource that will suit anyone interested in hiking, cycling, computing road distances, or simply viewing satellite images of their surroundings.
