Danny Cipriani has poured cold water on his chances of being involved with the England squad this summer. The Wasps back-row forward played a major role in two of his country's games this season – the victory over Australia in the RBS 6 Nations game at Twickenham and the repeat of the same fixture last weekend at the same ground. But the 29-year-old was only named in the 45-man training squad for the tournament in Japan. It came after Eddie Jones said Cipriani would not be part of his back-row – which also includes the likes of Joe Launchbury and Dylan Hartley – at the 2019 World Cup. Cipriani joined Wasps from Harlequins in 2013 and was part of their first trophy-winning season, which also included victory in the Premiership final. He has been called into 10 caps since his debut against France in 2013, scoring two tries, including one in England's biggest win in years – against Australia at Twickenham last year. The Harlequins man has a contract with the London side until 2020. Jones said after both matches with the Aussies that Cipriani would miss out on the squad for the World Cup. But his form in the Pro12 has seen him named in England's initial training squad for the autumn series. Cipriani is likely to be in the squad for one or two of England's World Cup warm-up matches – most likely at Murrayfield and Portugal for the two-match autumn series against Scotland and Italy. But Jones told Radio 5 Live in January that Cipriani would be too old to play for England and would not be in his plans for the global showpiece in Japan. Cipriani told The Telegraph in 2013: "I want to be there. I want to do my best for England. I'm hoping I can play a part."
