the Site Rooster iron ore project, says the company's operations manager, Garry Henty. Mr Henty said a small project, staffed by only five people, would be the first step towards a new integrated operation processing ore from multiple, large deposits. The Site Rooster project, in the Yumbah area in Queensland's central west, produces about 30,000 tonnes of iron ore a year and has a reserve of about 50 million tonnes, according to Rio Tinto. Mr Henty said the new staff would help the company further develop its joint venture to process iron ore from the site. "We are looking for people with some engineering and project management skill, but also people with interest in mining operations," he said. "A lot of what we do is managing the project, managing the companies and managing the staff... so we are looking for people who have some experience in that as well." Mr Henty said a number of jobs were open in Rockhampton, where the company is based. He said the jobs were being advertised in both the 82138339de
