[Leptin and its role in the initiation and development of insulin resistance]. Leptin is a hormone produced by the white adipose tissue, that has a pleiotropic effect. This protein is secreted into the plasma as a soluble molecule whose level is correlated to the amount of fat stores in the body. In case of chronic caloric excess, increases in the concentration of this hormone would result in the onset of insulin resistance and hyperphagia. This model of leptin-induced insulin resistance could help us to understand the pathophysiology of type 2 diabetes. Leptin is a key molecule in the control of body weight and energy homeostasis. The discovery of leptin and the definition of its physiological and pathological role is the start of a new research field in the basic and clinical medicine. Sarasota, FL – Mobile monitoring for dogs and cats is now the easiest way to make sure your pet is staying healthy. Thanks to a new app called Flo, you can check in on your pet right from your smartphone. Flo has a sleek and intuitive interface that makes it easy for you to see how your pet is doing from anywhere in the world. It includes live graphs showing your pet's heart rate, temperature, and activity levels, and highlights any health issues your dog or cat has. Flo runs off the FloConnect service and is completely secure, allowing you to view your pet's information on your own time. And Flo's one-click access to your pet's vet records lets you make changes in real-time. "Flo is the most user-friendly mobile monitoring app you've ever seen," says Rosemary McFall, the vice-president of programs at BluePearl, the makers of Flo. "It's a no-brainer. Anyone can now keep up with their pet's health from anywhere in the world." Flo works with any Bluetooth-enabled smartphone running iOS 6, Android, BlackBerry OS, or Windows Phone 7.1 and up. And once you download Flo, the app will automatically pair with your pet's ID chip and you can start accessing all of the information you need about your pet right away. "Flo is so easy to use," says Vinay Mehta, the CEO
