Q: How do I paint azure lights? I'm trying to paint the lights on my Microsoft Azure. I've seen people paint white lights on their Azure, and I'd like to do the same thing. I was unable to find any information online or through the help center about how to paint lights on the Azure. Is there any way that I can paint these lights on my Azure? A: For placing lights on real world location in Microsoft Azure: You can use these 3rd party apis called Microsoft.Azure.AppServices.Light. 1) Aspose - 2) TouchDevelop - 3) AzureLight - 4) BeLink - They all support Azure Lights. For reference, refer this 3rd party site also Hope this helps. T. maritima in response to the salinity stress \[@pone.0221543.ref050]\]. The heat stress of the amphipod S. melanothron alters the distribution of HSP genes in the gills at the transcriptional level \[@pone.0221543.ref039]\]. In our study, the different HSP genes except for HSP42 and HSP70 were downregulated after acute heat stress in the salinity-tolerant amphipod H. amicus. This may suggest that HSPs can participate in the response of H. amicus to heat, as well as play a key role in the salinity adaptation of amphipods. The protein could resist the effects of heat stress by repairing the damaged proteins, inhibiting the development of several illnesses, or cleaving the damaged proteins to further degrade them into small peptides and amino acids

LOS ANGELES (Hollywood Reporter) - Al Jean is regarded by some as the most successful writer-producer in comedy. The head writer for "Saturday Night Live" for the past two decades, Jean has adapted countless theatrical plays to the small screen, including "The Producers," "Waiting for Godot," "The Sunshine Boys," "Dinner for Five," "Some Like It Hot," "The Odd Couple," "Noises Off," and "Top Girls." Less noted is that he is also a novelist, best known for "Fear of Flying" and "Neurotica," and the author of a recent book, "The Play's the Thing: How Comedy Works," which examines 20th-century comedy in the context of plays, movies, and radio. We spoke to Jean recently about the genesis of the "Borat" movie, the play he's doing this fall in San Francisco, and what he considers to be the last laugh in his years as a comedy writer. Q: "Borat" is obviously a big part of your life, what are your thoughts on the movie, and what did you think when the movie came out? A: I was shocked, first of all. I never thought the movie would play all over the world, and I never thought there would be a DVD. That kind of makes me a dinosaur. Q: What's the tension, for you, between writing and editing and also writing and producing? A: I know what you're going to say, but I love writing and I love editing and doing production. A comedy writer has to have at least a semi-good sense of what the production is going to be like. There is a point where you get caught up in it, and where you feel like, 'What is this going to be like?' It's funny to say, but I have been so mad at myself at times for going off and not making sure it all was right. Q: You didn't write the sequel to "Borat," which is supposedly in the works. Did you resist the urge to do it? A: I don't think you can ever resist the urge to write a sequel. I'm always at the point where I get in trouble because I feel so guilty for thinking that I've said all I can say about that character. Q: What did you think when "Borat" was released
