What should I expect from the sport I want to try? How do I know if a club is the right fit for my child? So we put together a list of questions to help you start your search. How do I get my child in sport? First things first. In this country, children of all abilities and disabilities are entitled to take part in sport and physical activity. That means that all children are automatically part of sport and physical activity for the same reason: to get fitter, to improve their health and wellbeing, and most of all, to enjoy it. Q: How do I access the login screen? I have install Ubuntu 11.10, but when I run, it automatically open the last session I was run. How can I access the login screen? A: Start the login screen by entering the following in the terminal: sudo gdm3 The login screen will open with the default settings, including the username and login password. If you see this screen for more than one session, then you have a problem that you will need to fix. Q: How to disable implicit join in a case expression? How can I do this? SELECT count() FROM foo WHERE bar = 'anything' OR bar IS NULL Because the query optimizer thinks I want to do this: SELECT count() FROM foo WHERE bar = 'anything' UNION ALL SELECT count() FROM foo WHERE bar IS NULL In the SQL query, this is an implicit join, so that the first count() is the base count. But the UNION/ALL subquery is done all together and the result isn't limited to foo. How can I rewrite this case expression to get the optimized execution? A: Here is one way: SELECT (count(case when bar = 'anything' then 1 end) + count(case when not(bar is not null) then 1 end)) as c FROM foo; I believe this should be functionally equivalent to UNION, the difference being that UNION eliminates duplicates. This is not true of the subquery approach, as the duplication that can happen will still be there.
