Long ago in a galaxy not so far away from the dark water world we all live in now, we were given a game by a company called Shiny Entertainment that we were all told was coming out for the PlayStation 2 and that was Mega Man 9. And if you don't know what that means, you need to know it was actually really good. It was a bit hard to describe at the time. Lots of shooting, running, climbing and trying to not get blown up. And it's still like that, only now it's on your phone. Anyway, between Mega Man's 10th anniversary and the release of Mega Man 11, we got a pretty nifty side game, Mega Man Battle Network - just call it Mega Man Battle Legends for short. So if you're thinking about buying Mega Man 11 and maybe aren't that keen on giving up your PS4's second screen to play a 3DS game - well, you can just go and play this game instead. Now you've got one of the best hand-to-hand fights you're ever going to find in a video game, if you're that way inclined. IGN (2015)A great side game for the boys and girls who like to play Mega Man with a bit more weight behind their moves. Sometimes, when I look at the Mega Man Battle Network series, I'm reminded of the classic children's television show, Harry and His Bucket Full of Dinosaurs. You remember it? It was a really good show, but there was a guy called Harry who was an expert at making dinosaurs out of cardboard and we all thought it was really cool. Mega Man Battle Network has that feeling about it. At the start of the game, your protagonist (dressed in his Mega Man donning clothes of course) gets tangled up in a spider web and starts to get pulled up into the stratosphere. He's in trouble! Because of this, he summons a battle diorama by using an analogue stick to select some objects from his on-board inventory. It's like that fun and simple mobile game you played back in the day, but it's the kind of game that Mega Man could have been part of had he been more involved. You see, in Mega Man Battle Network, you can make all sorts of things from the everyday items that you can carry. Maybe you want to make a little tool kit, a chess set, a model of Mega Man or even just a basic portal. That's where things get interesting, and

Anything That You Can't With Another Adult Photo: Thinkstock As kids, we have a whole lifetime of lessons to learn through experience. As adults we have the memories and experiences of our childhood, and with them comes a lotta work. By rekindling what you can with something else, you can extend your childhood, regardless of your age. We're all guilty of watching classic movies like Halloween and The Blues Brothers at least once a year. But in all honestly, why should you? Is it time to let the whole, "We're a generation apart from our parents, and we're probably too close to them to fully appreciate their culture and values," go? There's something quite alluring about watching an absurd movie as a teen when you're an adult. It's easy enough to do, plus you get to embrace the very things you're supposed to despise: The juvenile humor (especially in the form of black comedy): We absolutely had to awkwardly sit through 50 First Dates as a teen; we know from experience. The nostalgia for terrible 80's music and even worst 80's movies (there's even a playlist called "Original Time Crisis" to prove it): Did you ever hear yourself singing (maybe even mimicking) Aerosmith's "Dude (Looks Like A Lady)?" as a zombie? It's okay, we all did it at some point. The importance of practical knowledge (you'll actually be planning your cocktail party tonight): You probably shouldn't talk to 8-year-olds to determine what your party plans should be, but we're not saying you should listen to our judgment. So it's only fair that in college you really have to use critical thinking to make good political decisions for the world. The serendipity of an experimental experience that could lead you to make the world a better place (lots of colorful booze and drugs in the movie): You're already on your mother's drugs and you're already hazed by college. Just add drugs to the mix and you become (in spirit) that quintessential college experience. There are some things you will simply enjoy as an adult but, honestly, 10 years later, it doesn't sound the same. While it ↔

A SET OF NON-RANDOM PAST QUEST PUSHABLE POINTS My Little Obsession is a non-random puzzle inspired puzzle game developed by Markus "CZPack" Zerling for the PC (Windows/Linux). In My Little Obsession you will experience puzzle popups, puzzles that come to you, puzzles that you are supposed to push. THE GAME: A Simple, yet Challenging, Puzzle Popup We all love puzzle games, especially those that are just so simple, yet beautiful to look at. My Little Obsession is one of these games. So what does My Little Obsession bring to the table? I suggest that you play My Little Obsession before you judge it. The game is simple, you think you know it, but yet there is more to it than what you may think. While it does not come with any huge graphical complexity, as compared to say, Forest, you will find yourself truly enjoying the beauty of how the game looks. WHAT'S NEW: RESOLUTIONS My Little Obsession now supports multi-screens, you can have up to 4 screens, and each screen can have up to 2 resolutions (while I am not quite sure of the details, but I will make sure to add more screens at some point, so you can enjoy it more. We have had dozens of requests to support more than 2, even though we did not originally plan for that to be one of our goals for the game, so we added support for that on the fly, hahaha.) Since there are more screens, there will also be more puzzles that use those screens. More on that in a bit. NEW UPDATES NEW BUTTONS That's right, the game has new buttons. First of all, you should know by now that you have to click the button to start the puzzle, simple as that. We hope you enjoy them as much as we do. Click on the button to start the puzzle. Yet again, we are making nice improvements to the game
