With the recent patch, the descriptions of buildings and how to build stuff are finally in place. Also, it appears there's only one pick-up in town, meaning, all resources are available now. What's your opinion on the game? I really like this game; I haven't played any other tower-defense/siege game, but I love what I see here. I feel like the tower part of it is definitely more enjoyable, but I'm having fun with the siege part as well. I'm glad it looks fairly similar to Anno, I hope it's obvious what came from which game when you play it as I think that would be a fun and interesting challenge. My biggest issue with the game so far is that you can't break your defensive (or offensive) turrets. It seems like as long as you have a little bit of health on your base you can't take any damage, even from heroes. The dungeons you can explore are interesting, I would like to see a larger variety of levels though, maybe in the 10 minute time limit there could be something different such as an upgrade or a dungeon level instead of just one level. On topic, I'd love to play the game more but it's rare that I find myself to be online right now. Hopefully that will change before the game goes more live. I can also see a lot of potential as far as customization. The draw of Anno was being able to upgrade or change parts as you like with microtransactions, so it's great to see that feature and even more of it I think. We're about to post a new patch to

The Eastern and Western Europe is known by their own identity, countries and cities. The renowned 15th century is also known for spectacular royal castles and beautiful cities, but also for bloodshed in wars and terrible epidemics. The Western Europe was in the middle of the Hundred Years War between France and England, and the Burgundians, Armagnacs and the House of Valois were fighting for the power. The industrialization in the early 15th century was huge, while the plague was sweeping the Earth. New technologies were invented, and new weapons. Tancred of Hauteville became a knight of the Pope, while the Holy Roman Emperor was trying to hold the power of the German empire. New Process: The development was based on the idea that a historically correct models must have: - realistic unit sizes - realistic animations and unit capabilities - revised and optimized maps and units - Well worked historical commands - an overall view of the era - an overall view of the period Requirements and limitations: - Source Images are the images used for the rendered models, so this material is not available on your computer. Please get the files from the Internet. - The overall view is set to 15th century, while all new additions are modeled after the 15th century period. - The map is set to 15th century - The unit graphics and animations are new. Old animations have been improved. - This is a basic pack, all units are painted in a medieval color palette (1000 - 1600) - I think that this is a nice little pack, that you can use in one of your country or city mods. But I hope to create more packs for the 15th century in future.
