Question #1 Page: 2 Question #2: Timestamp: 11/19/2015 Time: 6:59 PM Name: Å∏· Henderson,Brad Like I answered the question wrong or something :sorry:.Cerebral haemodynamics during the luteal and ovulatory phases of the menstrual cycle. Women in the luteal phase of the menstrual cycle have higher resting cerebral blood flow than women in the follicular phase. This phase is associated with higher endocrine and autonomic activity. We therefore assessed haemodynamic and vascular responses to orthostatic challenge in women during the luteal and ovulatory phases of the menstrual cycle. Thirty-seven women with menstrual cycles of 21 to 35 days. Haemodynamic responses during the luteal and ovulatory phases of the menstrual cycle, during orthostatic challenge (head-up tilt from 60 degrees to 70 degrees), and during a mental stress test (Trier Social Stress Test) were compared. The hemodynamic response to orthostatic challenge was assessed by measuring changes in haemoglobin concentration measured by near-infrared spectroscopy and in middle cerebral blood flow with bilateral transcranial Doppler. In the luteal phase (n=18), the increase in heart rate during
