Akin to the classic arcade game "Missile Command", this fast paced first-person shooter takes players to a mysterious world where waves of enemy missiles are raining down on the Earth's population. Aliens (or "eggs") have invaded our world and made themselves at home. The only one that stands in their way is you, and your trusty unit of eight "boys". Gameplay in Defense Grid 2 isn't like any other shooter out there. The main difference is that you play as a lone individual instead of one of the ranks of the elite. In this game, you have to balance the need to defend the civilians against the need to protect your assets. The game will keep players on their toes, balancing the need to stay alive and destroy the aliens. I've been working on several games, but to be honest i don't do this type of games ever since. But I did this project because It's a really nice challenge. Plus I want to make the code as pure and minimalistic as possible. About me: I've been working on my own projects since I was 16 years old. My favorite programming language is VHDL, and I'm an electronics engineer. It's hard to say what made me do this, but I just have this feeling that I have to do this! About game: You play a crewman of the mysterious Shimmer that's flying through the sea. They have a secret weapon called the foam cannon. You can destroy your enemies with your cannon and collect skulls which are on the ships. But also watch out for the zombie skeletons. They attack from all sides. You can use your cannon while they are attacking to hit them into pieces. Try to destroy all the ships to complete the game. Support About the idea for the game: It was me and my friend. We have been playing around in the computer room at school and we got this idea for the game. About the environment: I designed it in Scratch. It's a clean-cut language that's easy to learn. So i created the whole game in it. Also it's very easy to make games with it. The hardest part in the development of the game: Sitting down in the desk and thinking about how everything's going to work. Short arcade game drawn and coded by Artur Petrov. You have to fight the pirates in the air, sea and land. Play time between 10 – 15 minutes. I also really enjoy happy hanging out with the ladies in my cooking classes, so this is perfect for when I want to hang out with my girlfriends and eat good food at the same time! One of my favorite pairs for a basic Mexican meal or party is: MUSHROOM sauce, Mexican Potatoes, salsa verde and a Southwestern green salad. (I like buying a fresh salad in each meal because it saves more time for me and everyone uses parts of the salad, it's healthy for all!) Salsa verde is a great switch up for the classic tomato salsa. It's a staple of the south and it's now available in most grocery stores! A great suggestion from the Chop Shop mentioned in the podcast was Mexican Popcorn. Mexican Popcorn is a wonderful Mexican kids snack that is stick to your ribs! Its light fluffy consistency make it the perfect snack choice for my main dish and my kids choose it over boneless chicken fingers! Another great suggestion came from the Chop Shop, Orange Fudge. Made from Carrots, Ginger, spices, orange zest and coconut milk, Orange Fudge might be the perfect combination for you too! Also these two pairs are a must at my house. Meatloaf with oatmeal crumbled over top. Herbed poultry that is brined for a few days in a vinegar and onion based brine. I usually pan fry my chicken in vegetable oil for a few minutes and it comes out super juicy, and delicious. A great recommendation was to use the
