"It doesn't matter how loud you speak if the people around you can't hear." That's how one of the guides at the Polish Language Centre in Amsterdam described his teaching style.

According to the National Agency for Education, one in five Polish students in the Netherlands currently has hearing problems. Sometimes it's not only a matter of not being able to hear, sometimes it's a matter of not being able to understand. Every day a deafalicious Facebook group with the motto 'Say it loud, Polish style' gathers and sparks deaf conversations. What started as a small group of friends on Facebook with over 1.500 followers now has a Facebook group with over 4.300 followers. "When I first posted it, people were kind of wondering what it's about. But now I see that people like it," said Alexandra Socha, one of the founders. "I mean, if you're deaf and you're Polish, you have to really make sure you say your words loudly so people can hear what you're saying. That's why there are over 20 group members who post in the group every single day. "We'd have long discussions about big topics like politics and what country we live in. That's always a good topic to bring up in this group because it's something we can comment on in a public way," she says.
