An Epiphany City is a type of metropolis. Cities are generally designed to build wealth and jobs, and sometimes even to build important infrastructure. They are usually larger than villages but smaller than towns. Cities are made up of towns and neighbourhoods. A Dev team can make a new type of city, each of which can be unique in terms of cities within it. Each of these may create different challenges in terms of the game and its development. Devs may find themselves creating series of cities to serve a specific purpose such as settling people, generating prestige, or making the world more suitable for a different type of population. More information about what we all do is provided on the dev's page, please see below. About Us: As a dev team you'll be responsible for the city. From layout, design and enhancement of cities and towns, to developing a particular feel for a locale. Thanks, Epiphany City Tuesday, July 20, 2012 Epiphany City: Prologue The Epiphany City Team has started its journey in the City of Everday. The first step is to create a start to the game with a new city that can be, and is, unique in a way that is tailored to the needs of a specific player and the needs of the community. In the Town of Eberswalde players will start on the 'C' Plantation. This is home to the famous Eberswalde Plantation. The village can be used to provide income in the form of sugar production or by extending it and placing mills. Players can also build a large market, perhaps in partnership with other players, which will provide added income in form of taxes on players. Several Sims will live in the town. There is a school, post office, as well as several other shops. Sims who have not yet reached adulthood will work in the cane fields or at the mills. Simultaneously players will be able to work in their home to start a new business and develop it and its pay rate. While the plantation is the starting point for the town, players should keep in mind that Eberswalde remains a real location. Located in the middle of an agricultural region, it will be a great location for farms to be expanded, or for a player to develop to sugar industry. Eberswalde is a town with a wide range of potential. New developments such as condominiums can be built in the town for players who want to live in
