I found following helpful post: (Disclaimer: I am not affiliated to the author, just found it very helpful) Within this post there is a reference to a Interceptor in the manager that is quite easy to config in a classic WSO2 solution. My question: In a WSO2-ESB environment (version 4.5) can this Interceptor be applied? Is there any difference when configuring it for HTTP, HTTPS and also from within an application call (with ESB Client API)? A: Yes you can apply it in WSO2 ESB 4.5 and you can use a custom esb client to access your API by overriding the following method of WSO2 ESB Transport Client to call your application (you can see this method while debugging wso2 esb) public TransportClient call(String uri, String method, Map> headers,
