“To make the authentic feeling of player and ball motion, we used the player’s movements captured by our technology to power the gameplay,” said David ‘Moo’ Wilson, Executive Producer at EA Sports. “The technology was developed from extensive interviews with top players and experts in sports science.” ““You don’t feel so much like a player but a scientist who understands that every move of a football player, every touch of the ball and every angle of the tackle has been scientifically tested and verified,” said Matt MacGregor, Lead Coach at EA Sports. “The team at EA Sports has been working incredibly hard on perfecting the moving player, improving player animations and re-creating new gameplays and concepts. We are excited to share it with all our fans in November.” More than 500 licensed players will participate in motion capture during the production of the game. By using the real-life player data to drive the game, EA SPORTS has pushed the limits of what is possible in the sport of football. “We wanted to drive the game with the most authentic real-world player data to create the best simulation football game of all time. As a sport and as an entertainment format, football has evolved throughout history by improving and adjusting to every possible method.” said David Rutter, Head of Technical Development at EA SPORTS. “FIFA 20 was the first time that EA SPORTS captured and processed real-time data from a football game at a club level. We’re using the same process and the latest data to make FIFA 22 the best game of all time.” It really feels like the player is actually moving around the pitch in real life. I was nervous about this new technology but it looks fantastic and shows just how much work has gone into the game development. You don't feel so much like a player but a scientist who understands that every move of a football player, every touch of the ball and every angle of the tackle has been scientifically tested and verified.
