This site is more useful than most of the other "big sites" out there. This is great news for everyone who needs a very basic answer, which is what I use it for the most. It's sad to see this. --- devin If it's more useful than the rest then it's a pretty rare thing. Even rarer than things getting better. It's that "top of Reddit" feeling, when the front page is almost 90% garbage and the actual content is on pages 5-50. ----- joshfraser There have been a few posts about switching to StackOverflow in the past. This, according to what seems to be the consensus, is the best alternative. Anyone interested in this? var camelcase = require('camelcase'); var keyof = require('./lang/keyOf'); / * camel case a word * @param {string} str string to camel case * @returns {string} the camel cased string */ module.exports = function camelCase(str) { return str.replace(/[/A-Z]/g, function (match) { return camelcase(match); }); }; / * camelcase a word * @param {string} word to

What's New In Adobe Photoshop 2021 (version 22)?

Q: MS Access SQL Query- Find many duplicate records I have a MS Access table that contains a variety of information, including a couple columns with application-related tracking codes. When these application codes are input, a record is created with a value of 1 for the field called "TrackingCode" and a 0 for the other fields. What I'd like to be able to do is find records that are duplicates for the TrackingCode column. I'm not much of a SQL person, so any help at all is greatly appreciated. A: You might be able to do it with an aggregate function. For example, lets say you wanted to count the number of records where the first six characters were the same. This can be done like so: SELECT First(Substring(Field1, 1, 6)) + IIF(Len(Substring(Field1, 1, 6))>0,0,1) FROM Table1; The ISNULL() function is used here because the above query will only give back the number of unique records. /* Copyright 2014 The Kubernetes Authors.
