O-linked glycosylation in Chinese mitten crab (Eriocheir sinensis): tissue-specific glycosyltransferases involved in hypoblast-segment-specific glycosylation. Chinese mitten crab Eriocheir sinensis (Crustacea) is the second-most important commercially cultured species of farmed crustaceans in China. The hypoblast-segment-specific glycosylation pattern in E. sinensis was determined in this study. A systematic analysis of the O-glycan structures from various tissues was performed by a combination of exoglycosidase digestions and MALDI-TOF-MS analysis. A total of 22 O-linked glycan structures were identified, which were classified into five different types: high-mannose type, hybrid type, paucimannose type, xylose-containing type, and core type.
