HD Online Player (putrid sex object videogolkes) Bypass Apple iPhone iOS 5 (5.1.1) AirPort Extreme (AirPort) Internet.Q: MySQL query if field value is equal to another field I've got the following set of queries. `SELECT count(email) as email_count FROM users WHERE email in ( SELECT email FROM users WHERE password = 'password' ) AND email in ( SELECT email FROM users WHERE password = 'password' )` I want to count the number of email addresses that match the password in each of the two queries, so the result would be email_count 2. How would I do this? A: You should use INNER JOIN or LEFT JOIN and GROUP BY for this: `SELECT count(u1.email) AS email_count FROM users AS u1 INNER JOIN users AS u2 ON u1.email = u2.email AND u1.password = 'password' GROUP BY u1.email` A: If you know for sure there will only be 2 email addresses, then you can use `count(distinct email)`. `SELECT count(DISTINCT email) as email_count FROM users WHERE password = 'password'` If you expect multiple email addresses, then it's a bit more complicated: `SELECT count() as email_count FROM users WHERE password = 'password' AND email IN ( SELECT email FROM users WHERE password = 'password' )` Here's the full breakdown (assuming no more than 2 email addresses per user): `SELECT (SELECT count() from users where password = 'password') as first_count, (SELECT count() from users where password = 'password' AND email = first_email) as second_count, (SELECT count() from users where password = 'password' AND email = second_email) as third_count, (SELECT count(*) from users where password = 'password' AND email = third_email) as fourth_count, (`
