relationship not linking? I am building a project in Laravel 5.4 in which I have users, products and categories. I am linking the relationship between users and products and when user create a new product he gets an instance of the user, and when he updates the product he gets the instance of the user that has that product, which was created with that instance of the user. I understand that you are supposed to get the user first by `$user->products` and after that if he wants to update the product he has to pass that instance to the function `update()`, which in the update function I should use `$id`. But there is no way to get the id of the product? A: It would seem you are not stating the type of relationship correctly. From your question, it seems that your relationship is many-to-many but you have not defined this in your model. You need to define the model like this: `User.php public`

function products() { return $this->belongsToMany('App\Product'); }
Then just add the public function update() to your Product.php file:
Product.php
public function user() { return $this->belongsToMany('App\User'); } public function user() { return $this->belongsToMany('App\User'); } public function update() {
