Q: Why do the lines in these graphs of ratios of two square roots converge to 2? While looking at ratios of two square roots, I noticed these two graphs seem to converge to 2 over a long enough time:  $\frac{\sqrt{2+x}}{\sqrt{2-x}}$  and  $\frac{\sqrt{2-x}}{\sqrt{2+x}}$ . I have checked my math, and it is correct, but I don't understand the logic, and also would be curious to see what people think. A: I get the feeling that there is something you don't see or that I don't understand and I'd appreciate if you could explain. For the first of those, you have:  $\frac{\sqrt{2+x}}{\sqrt{2-x}} = \frac{\sqrt{2+x}\sqrt{2+x}}{\sqrt{2-x}\sqrt{2+x}} = \frac{\sqrt{2^2+x^2}}{\sqrt{2^2-x^2}}$ . So by inspection  $\sqrt{2+x}$  and  $\sqrt{2-x}$  vary on the same ratio, which for  $x > 0$  is clear to be  $\frac{\sqrt{2^2+x^2}}{\sqrt{2^2-x^2}}$ . You can then use that fact to look at ratios of the numerators and the denominators. For the second, it's the same with  $x$  Conventional, a sliding member is formed of metal plates as a material. The metal plate formed of aluminum is excellent in strength and light weight. However, the price of aluminum is high and thus the price of the sliding member made of aluminum is high. In addition, there are problems in that consumption of aluminum itself tends to increase and a mass of scraps derived from cutting off the sliding member is large. To address the problems, it is known that resin composite materials made of glass fibers and thermosetting resins as a raw material and various metals as a reinforcing material are molded, and a molded product is used in the sliding member of a slide bearing.
