The HyperMotion Technology includes a more precise, innovative and lifelike way for AI teammates to read, anticipate and act on the ball. They also react more naturally in close situations when being fouled or pressured by an attacker. Behaviors based on in-depth and detailed player-motion capture are used to adapt the player to a given situation and contextualize their on-ball actions. In addition to new features, this year's game launches with new career modes such as "UEL Champions," which plays out via the UEFA Champions League, and the "UEFA Supercup," which pits two top European clubs in a first-of-its-kind football competition. The FIFA video game franchise has sold more than 350 million games and generated more than $10 billion in global retail sales. The franchise has recently enjoyed tremendous success with the release of FIFA 18, which topped more than 20 million copies in its first week of availability and saw a fantastic start to its sales in the UK with more than 150,000 copies in the first week of release. In fact, more than 500,000 units of FIFA 18 have already been sold in the first week in France. Comments: E3 2017 Ubisoft Interesting! I like the idea and I think it will be a great addition to the game. But we don't know when it will be released and what will be the price for the copy. Hope it will be really cheap! By HadjiOn June 23, 2017 11:35 AM Hey Can you please tell us when the Game will be released in Europe please, Thanks! By james-mckinley@fifa-uefafootball-team.comOn June
