The tax rate on dividends and interest would be reduced accordingly. To further reduce income taxation, existing capital gains tax rates would be retained. The experts on both sides appear to agree that the tax rate on long-term capital gains (either indexation or taxable) would be about the same as the tax rate on regular income (both potentially 20%). When those long-term capital gains are capitalized to create growth capital, the argument for a capital gains tax rate would be stronger. There would be no income tax 6
