Switzerland Hosts Euro F1 Event Racing fans in Switzerland can watch six Formula One drivers compete to win the title in the home race. For years, people have complained the F1 calendar has too many races held in Europe and not enough in countries like Russia. Now, the annual Swiss Grand Prix is hosting its first ever event. It's the first time in four years that there's been an F1 race in Switzerland. Baku and Switzerland have been in talks for a while, but the race was finalized in April when the F1 CEO Bernie Ecclestone reached a deal with the Swiss government. The race will the swiss capital city of Bern on Sunday, August 16. Ecclestone says the deal made the race possible because of Switzerland's growing popularity in the F1 world. "I think it was more important to bring F1 his high in passed end we are ready to do that," Ecclestone told fans. Races take place every two years, with the next one in Russia. Then come Belgium, Canada, Great Britain, Germany, Hungary, Austria, Spain and Monaco. President Donald Trump is not a fan of NPR. Now a number of NPR staffers are boycotting the president's favorite radio network over revelations that the White House had banned reporters from covering a bill the House passed earlier this week to fund the government. 6d1f23a050
