The new year is just around the corner! As we approach the first day of February, I think about all the different changes coming our way. We're looking forward to a special night out, more family time, and of course a new year of classes at school. I've been seeing quite a few tv shows which have featured fun recipes and ingredients. I'm definitely looking forward to that as well! Part of my excitement is because I want to revamp the food I eat. I have been on a bit of a plate shift lately and I'm looking forward to seeing if I can also make some changes in what I eat. I love that the new product line from the Native Foods Market includes some new veggie roll-ups! These are so delicious and I've had a blast making them for my family! You can get your own little rolls now in grocery stores and they look really appetizing! I put these in a small microwave safe dish and set it on a plate, covered with aluminum foil. You just microwave it for about one minute. I like to keep it on the dry side because I don't like that kind of soggy veggie roll-up. On this recipe, I had to ask for some substitutions on the mushroom and the onions. The one thing that really made these rolls stand out was the slight addition of spice. I bought some of the new Native foods seasonings and they were really good. I would 6d1f23a050
