Iron Grip : Warlord Keygen System Requirements:.Q: how to expose and bind a C++ class in visual basic? I have a C++ class that I need to expose to a VB6 application. I need to do this with out using (de)composition which would be difficult because I have member data that needs to be protected. I have tried this Public Function Load(ByVal Data As String) As Object Set App = CreateObject("Example") With App .Load(Data) End With Set Load = App End Function The problem here is that I am getting a type mismatch with the load function, however If I wrap the call in a try/catch I am able to get the string loaded into the instance of my C++ class. It appears that something is getting lost in the translation. Does anyone know how I can expose and bind this class using a COM object from VB6? Thanks A: Accessing COM objects from VB is a bit of a pain. I've been using the Component Object Model for all my "cross-language" COM programming. I'd suggest you create a new project in Visual C++, select ATL dll project, then add your VB project as a reference. You can then add a Type library (.tlb) to the VB project, and a module in the VB project for your C++ class (you can name it what you like - "examples.exe" for example). Now when you create an instance of the class 6d1f23a050
