MORBIDELLI .ATM Time, Labor, and Cash Money for the Job You Want ATM Time, Labor, and Cash Money for the Job You Want Time is money. Time is a funny thing, you may think. In the traditional sense of the word, time doesn't represent how much you're making. It doesn't represent how much you're losing at poker. It doesn't matter if you're losing because the cards are bad or if you're losing because you're winning. In the typical situation, when you're sitting at a card table with ten or more other people and you're not winning, you're losing. If you're spending more time than you're making, you're losing money. If you're spending the time you're making, you're losing time. If you're spending the amount of money you're making, you're making money, period. If you're spending less than the amount of money you're making, you're losing money. This is as basic as it gets in the world of work and in the world of money management. I'm not going to bore you with the number of people who work, don't work, or work part-time. I'm not going to bore you with the percentage of people who say they're lucky, unlucky, or unlucky-lucky. I'll just tell you the basic difference between winning and losing. If you can organize your time, your money, and your labor—and there's probably a difference—you're going to win. If you can't organize them, and you're smart about it, you're going to lose. Getting organized is a skill that must be learned and practiced. It's easy to find the good in a bad job or to find excuses for working, but it's another thing to stand up and say, "I'm going to work, and I'm going to work to win." Maybe you're thinking you have to wait for that chance to work for a company that pays well. But that "chance" is a bunch of mother-fucking bullshit. You either choose to find a good job and do a good job, or you choose to find a lousy job and do a lousy job. If you choose to do a lousy job and do it for a lousy
